

G^{DIRECTED} GIVING

UC Davis School of Law is proud to recognize the extraordinary contributions that friends, alumni, faculty, and staff have made to support endowments and scholarships and other privately raised funds established to the benefit of the Law School. Each of these dedicated funds provides invaluable support and is critical to the future of King Hall.

Thank you to everyone who contributed so generously to make these supporting funds a reality. Each of them continues to grow, and more will be created as UC Davis School of Law continues to build its private support for students, faculty, and academic and public service programs.

CHARITY KENYON '77

Over the course of more than 30 years of practicing appellate law, news media law, and public contract law in Sacramento, Charity Kenyon '77 has won so many honors that she jokes, "I sometimes think they just multiplied in the closet."

Kenyon has been named one of the Top 100 Attorneys in Northern California by Super Lawyers magazine in 2005, 2008, 2009 and one of the Top 50 Female Lawyers 2004-2009, as well as one of Best Lawyers top First Amendment Law attorneys for every year since 1991. She has also received the Sacramento County Bar Association Humanitarian of the Year Award, the UC Davis School of Law Distinguished Alumnus Award and Alumni Association Citation for Excellence 1997, among many others.

As impressive as her list of honors may be, Kenyon's record in court is at least equally imposing. Kenyon, who was the 2008-09 president of the California Academy of Appellate Lawyers and a founding partner at Kenyon Yeates LLP in Sacramento, has represented clients before the California Courts of Appeal and Supreme Court and the federal Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in more than 130 appellate and writ proceedings, with more than 30 published decisions. She has been particularly active and influential with regard to First Amendment law and the media, and has twice defended the right of reporters to protect unpublished information and confidential sources, eventually garnering a unanimous decision in the California Supreme Court.

Kenyon credits King Hall and Professor Emeritus John Poulos for providing the foundation for her work and a practical sense of how to apply First Amendment principles in court. "A lot of professors will teach the constitutional principles but not how you actually engage and use them as tools for your client," she said. "Professor Poulos was very practical."

Despite her busy schedule, Kenyon has been actively involved in the community, particularly in environmental, land use, and food justice issues. She is also interested in health care ethics, and has served as a member of the Bioethics Committee with both UC Davis Health System and Kaiser Permanente, and has frequently spoken on related issues, including to King Hall students. A member of the King Hall Alumni Board since 2003, she has also given generously to the Law School and helped raise money for scholarships.

"I am definitely a product of the UC system," said Kenyon, who attended UC Santa Cruz before King Hall. "Whatever I've been able to achieve was based on a foundation that UC provided, so I have been very interested in supporting the University, especially in this time of budget crisis, and in raising money for scholarships for law students. My family and I have gotten so much from UC, we can never repay more than a fraction of the benefits we've received."

DONOR PROFILE

DANIEL C. GIRARD '84

As a student at King Hall, Daniel C. Girard '84 acquired not only a rock-solid grasp of the practicalities of the law, but also a sense of social responsibility that has guided him throughout his successful career in civil litigation. That's partly why he helped to direct $95,000 in Cy Pres awards from class action suits he prosecuted to the Fair Business Practices and Investor Advocacy Chair at UC Davis School of Law.

Girard, who has successfully prosecuted more than 75 class action matters and who has served since 2004 as a member of the Federal Civil Rules Advisory Committee, was drawn to King Hall by the Law

School's reputation for a supportive atmosphere, a pragmatic approach to teaching law, and a low faculty-student ratio. "All of this panned out, and it was really what I was looking for," he said.

Several instructors made strong impressions. "Bob Hillman's Securities Regulation class has really stayed with me throughout my career," said Girard. "I've stayed in touch with Bob and he's counseled me through several key transitions in my career," Girard adds.

After graduation, he worked in San Francisco with Brobeck, Phleger & Harrison, where he had been a summer associate, doing securities issuances for corporate clients including Wells Fargo. From there, he went to Lief, Cabraser, Heimann & Bernstein, to practice class action litigation, and in 1994, he started his own firm, Girard Gibbs, where he has enjoyed spectacular successes in cases including In re Corrections Corporation of America Securities Litigation, a securities class action that resulted in a settlement of $104 million for his clients.

Girard is most proud of the instances in which he's been able to help people most in need. In Ho v. San Francisco Unified School District, he represented Chinese-American families whose admission to district schools was subject to a racial quota system. "We agreed to a settlement on the first day of trial in which the district agreed to do away with the quota system," he said. "Defending the constitutional rights of schoolchildren is a privilege for any lawyer, and I was fortunate to work with an outstanding group of parents and a great trial team on such an important cause."

Girard is also proud of the class action brought against American Fair Credit Association on behalf of consumers who had joined the association in hopes of repairing bad credit ratings but wound up paying excessive membership fees as well as continued fees and ruined credit when they tried to cancel. "It was a scheme to entrap people who had impaired credit, and it was very vigorously defended for more than six years, but we succeeded in getting a very good result," said Girard. "This was a settlement of about $30 million for a very vulnerable class of people, and we're proud of the results we obtained."

As part of the resolution of the case, the court approved Girard's recommendation that a portion of the settlement be directed to support the Fair Business Practices Chair, now held by Professor Hillman.

"Corporations spend millions every year to influence public opinion in their favor. They are skilled in public relations. There are very few people who can frame legal issues from the perspective of consumers and investors," he said. "By supporting the Fair Business Practices and Investor Advocacy Chair, the hope is that this will be a modest step in advancing the views of the investing and consuming public in contrast to the perspectives of corporate America."

THE HONORABLE M. KATHLEEN BUTZ '81

Kathleen Butz '81, Associate Justice of the California Courts of Appeal, Third Appellate District, knows the value of a good mentor.

"What inspired me and what made me believe that I could do this job was my mentor and role model, Judge Frank Francis," Butz said of the former Nevada County Superior Court judge. "I think it's very important for law students to have the opportunity to connect with mentors and role models, and that's why I've tried to make myself available."

Justice Butz, who has frequently worked with students in the King Hall Outreach Program (KHOP) and the Law School's moot court and mock trial programs and who volunteered to administer the state oath at the 2009 Swearing-In Ceremony in December, certainly has the kind of life experience that can provide inspiration.

After entering King Hall at age 28 as a recently divorced single mother, she went on to private practice with a firm in Nevada County from 1982 to 1996. Encouraged by Judge Francis, she ran for a seat on the Nevada County Superior Court that was vacated by his retirement, and prevailed in a hard-fought 1996 campaign. She served on the Nevada County bench, handling criminal, civil, and probate trials as well as family law and juvenile matters until October 2003, when she was appointed by Governor Gray Davis to the Third Appellate District.

"I loved the trial bench, and it was a great experience," she said. "But now I appreciate being in the position to take more time to research issues, and I find it very satisfying to work with two other colleagues on a panel, and to reach a correct resolution based on the facts and the law. Even though I was successful as an advocate, I feel I'm well suited to the appellate bench. The position demands attention to detail and involves the areas of law I experienced as a trial court judge."

Butz credits Judge Francis, whom she described as "just a great judge, a tremendous man, and a wonderful role model," for helping her to reach her full potential and hopes that through her work with KHOP, she can help others find an equally apt career choice.

"One of the things I think is critical for students considering law school is to get as much exposure as they can to lawyers and judges, in order to get a sense of whether this is really what they want to do," she said. She has also spoken to students in Professor Timothy Schooley's Appellate Practice course, helped judge the Neumiller Competition and other mock trial competitions at King Hall, and recruited other judges to help as well.

"I've tried to make myself available, and I feel that's part of what judges should do to help mentor the next generation," she said.
