

A History of Service

During her many years of public service, Wolk has earned a reputation as a problem solver by successfully tackling difficult issue areas. She has been honored for her leadership in water policy and flood protection—and for her support for preservation of parks, recreation, open space, and conservation.

Wolk currently served the Fifth Senate District, which includes the cities of Lathrop, Manteca, Stockton, and Tracy in San Joaquin County; Dixon, Fairfield, Suisun City, and Vacaville in Solano County; Davis, West Sacramento, Winters, and Woodland in Yolo County; as well as Isleton, Walnut Grove, and a portion of Elk Grove in Sacramento County.

Wolk chairs the Select Committee on Delta Stewardship and Sustainability, among others, and serves on numerous committees including the Natural Resources and Water Committee and the Select Committee on Green Jobs, Solar, Wind, and Clean Technologies.

Wolk is the Senate's representative on the Delta Protection Commission, charged with protecting and maintaining the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta's environmental, agricultural, and recreational values—and is a liaison advisor to the Delta Conservancy Board, tasked with supporting efforts that advance both environmental protection and the economic well-being of Delta residents.

She also serves on the California Wildlife Conservation Board's Legislative Advisory Committee, helping to allocate funding for important environmental projects throughout the state.

Additionally, Wolk was the first woman to chair the Assembly Water, Parks and Wildlife Committee, and used her four-year chairmanship to bring heightened attention to important topics including flood protection, the crisis in the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta, water management and climate change, land use, state parks, fisheries, and invasive species.
